Plumbing Supply and More Expands Toilet Parts Inventory to Simplify Common Repairs

September 01, 2026

Caln Township, Pennsylvania - September 01, 2026 -
A running toilet, weak flush, or slow leak at the base of the tank ranks among the most frequent household plumbing complaints, and in most cases the remedy is a single inexpensive component rather than a full fixture replacement. Yet many general hardware stores stock only a handful of generic toilet parts, leaving homeowners with mismatched components, unresolved leaks, or repeat trips to the aisle. Plumbing Supply and More is addressing that gap with an expanded catalog aimed at helping contractors and homeowners locate exact-match replacements.

The company's toilet parts category now spans more than 70 individual items covering the range of common repair needs. Inventory includes rubber, adjustable, and float-style flappers sized for both 2-inch and 3-inch flush valves, fill valves, flush levers and tank handles in multiple finishes and mounting configurations, tank-to-bowl gaskets and bolt kits, closet spuds, urinal spuds and diaphragm kits, pressure-assist tank components, all-in-one repair kits, and closet flange shims for leveling. Recognized manufacturer brands stocked include Fluidmaster, Korky, Gerber, BrassCraft, Sioux Chief, Wal-Rich, and Flushmate.

Exact matching matters more for toilets than many buyers expect. Flappers, fill valves, and flush levers vary by toilet brand and flush mechanism, and pressure-assist systems such as Flushmate use entirely different components than standard gravity-flush models. A part that appears similar on a blister-pack display can be the underlying cause of a leak or a running toilet that persists even after a repair attempt. To reduce guesswork, the Plumbing Supply and More toilet parts category page includes filtering tools that let buyers narrow selections by brand, material, item type, and manufacturer.

"Most toilet problems come down to one worn part, not a failing fixture, but the wrong flapper or fill valve sends people right back to where they started," said a spokesperson for Plumbing Supply and More. "The goal with our toilet parts category is to let a plumber or a homeowner identify the precise component their model requires and order it with confidence."

The expanded selection reflects the company's broader position as a trade-grade alternative to the limited toilet-parts assortment found in general retail. Toilet Parts By Plumbing Supply And More are offered alongside a wider catalog of professional plumbing and HVAC supplies, with free shipping available on most orders over $150, a 30-day return policy, and a best price guarantee. That structure serves both licensed plumbers sourcing for job sites and DIY homeowners tackling a repair on their own.

"A homeowner should not need a supply-house account to get the same part a professional would install," the spokesperson added. "Access to correctly specified components benefits everyone who wants a repair done once."

Plumbing Supply and More is a family-owned wholesale supply house with 75 years of operation, offering professional-grade plumbing and HVAC products to contractors and consumers alike.
