Tri-State Fence & Deck Surpasses 60 Reviews at 4.9-Star Rating

May 07, 2026

SEWELL, NJ - May 07, 2026 -
Tri-State Fence & Deck, a family-owned fencing and outdoor living contractor serving Gloucester, Camden, and Burlington counties, has surpassed 60 verified Google reviews while holding a 4.9-star average from homeowners across southern New Jersey. The company is owned and operated by the Torres Family, who run every estimate in person and ensure the high-quality standards that have made their company grow are upheld on every project.

The review milestone reflects steady growth in the company's service area, where most new business arrives through referrals and word-of-mouth between neighbors. Several recent installations have come from clusters of homes within the same subdivision, with homeowners requesting estimates after seeing a Tri-State Fence & Deck project on an adjacent or facing property. The pattern has been most visible on streets where a single installation prompted estimate requests from multiple neighbors within weeks, allowing the Torres team to complete several fences along the same block in short order.

The company also maintains an active educational presence on its Facebook and Instagram accounts, where the Torres team posts regular content covering fence material differences, local permit timelines, HOA architectural review steps, and how homeowners can prepare a yard before installation. The posts are written for homeowners who are early in the research phase ? before they have picked a material, received a quote, or understood what their town requires ? and are intended to help them arrive at an estimate appointment already informed. That content has contributed to inbound inquiries from homeowners outside the company's existing referral network.

Vinyl privacy fencing represents the majority of the company's residential fence installations, followed by aluminum, with Trex composite decks accounting for a growing share of overall project work. The Torres team handles every aspect of project coordination before any installation begins: permit applications, HOA architectural review submissions when required, and 811 utility marking to locate buried gas, water, and electrical lines. Chain link fencing is available for commercial properties. The company operates under New Jersey Home Improvement Contractor License #13VH13604500, is BBB accredited, and is Google Guaranteed. The Torres team handles every estimate in person and provides written quotes on-site.

The father-and-son ownership structure shapes day-to-day operations as much as the field work. Eriberto Torres Sr. brings decades of experience in outdoor structures; Torres Jr. handles customer communication, scheduling, and the company's educational content strategy. Both are present at job sites and remain available to customers through the project close-out. For homeowners dealing with permit delays or HOA review timelines, having a direct line to an owner ? rather than a project manager or scheduling coordinator ? makes a measurable difference in how quickly issues are resolved.

"Most of our customers do a lot of research before they ever pick up the phone, and our job is to give them clear information so they can make a smart decision for their property," said Eriberto Torres Snr., Co-Owner of Tri-State Fence & Deck. "When someone hires us after watching one of our videos or seeing our work next door, that tells us we are doing right by the people we already serve."

Homeowners interested in a free estimate can visit the company's website or call (856) 230-7082. Project photos and customer feedback from recent installations are available for review on its Google Business Profile.
